The search resumed on Monday for the missing father and son from Minnesota who disappeared while hiking in Colorado.

Damian McManus, 51, and Evan McManus, 18, drove from St. Louis Park, Minn., to Echo Lake in Colorado, as part of a spring break trip, a family spokeswoman told Minneapolis ABC affiliate KSTP. They were last accounted for on Wednesday, when the elder McManus phoned his wife and daughter, who were on their own spring break trip in Mexico.

A search for the missing McManuses on Sunday turned up no leads, according to the Denver Post. The search, which focused on Echo Lake's Mount Evans, consisted of about 20 rescuers who were assisted by a helicopter. Rescue efforts ended Sunday afternoon due to bad weather.

Searchers were unsure exactly where the father and son hikers went missing, a spokesman for the Alpine Rescue Team told the Post.

"Anyone who is familiar with Echo Lake knows it is rather sizable," said Bill Barwick. "There's a number of different trails they could have taken."

The missing McManuses were supposed to be back in Minnesota over the weekend, according to Minneapolis NBC affiliate KARE. The separate trips were supposed to be bonding experiences. Katherine McManus, the elder McManus' wife and Evan's mother, said she hadn't heard from her husband and son since Wednesday, but she wasn't concerned at the time because the area where they were hiking had spotty cell phone service. She became alarmed on Sunday after she returned from Mexico with her daughter and Evan's twin sister, Lauren McManus.

Mission: Using the subject's undershirt as a scent article, The search dog immediately located the subject's footprints near the LSP. She trailed the subject approx. 1/3 of a mile toward a ridge before a helicopter assisting in the search blew the ground scent away. The dog team reported that they thought the trail was going up toward the ridge. Shortly thereafter, a searcher located the subject's footprint up on the ridge. The dog team then repositioned in an effort to reacquire the trail on the other side. The other side was mainly sand and slickrock leading to a 1000 ft deep canyon. Due to issues with the scent having been blown all over the place, the canine team stopped and was discussing their options when the helicopter located the subject about 1/3 mile straight ahead of the team. Location: Holmes Gulch, Jefferson County, near Bailey

Subject: 21 year old male, college student in good health, went on bike ride

Dog team on search: One SARDOC dog team responded and searched.

Mission: SARDOC dog team was called as a water team by the Alpine Rescue Team because North Fork FD members said a bridge was precarious, water was running somewhat high and they were afraid he had slipped and fallen into the river. The first SARDOC dog worked from PLS east around drainages, down to the river and then up the river. He indicated heavily that there was strong scent in the river but he did not alert there. The dog also did a lot of nose tapping along bottom of cliff bands above the scent spot in river. Based upon the indications provided by the dog, the handler returned to base, reported coordinates of the strong scent and that she thought the scent was dropping down into the water from above. Handler then worked her second who immediately went on alert. The dog ran down and over several ridges towards the east, dropped to the river and started becoming very animated with body language that she was in the main scent area. She then ran up high into some cliffs. After several minutes, the dog returned and did a refind. She led the team up and over a ridge, at which point, another searcher came over, said the subject had been found and they needed to leave the area as the subject was deceased. The subject was deep in a narrow cave in the rock formation.
